Theirs is a time and energy consuming activity and is an essential service to the whole community. This will give you the opportunity to say "Thank you" by donating when Mr. Drinkard or Mr. Ford contacts you sometime during the month of November.

Christmas Has Dual Meaning For Appomattox County Family

As we prepare for the holiday season one Appomattox County family will find a dual meaning in the word Christmas.

One will be the spirit of Christmas. With celebrations of the birth of Jesus Christ, the giving and the friendly atmosphere which seems to come to all of us this time of year.

The other meaning will bring on apprehension and worry as two young members of the family are suffering from a blood deficiency called Christmas Syndrome.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Woods have three children, Troy 7, Marty 3 and Jerry Lee, 5. Both Troy and Marty have the Christmas Syndrome which shows many of the symptoms of hemophilia, a blood disease which prohibits the blood from clotting.

Troy is currently in Virginia Baptist Hospital in Lynchburg. His hospitalization is a result of a bruised leg. Like hemophilia, Christmas Syndrome causes even minor cuts and bruises to become serious problems to those who suffer from the disease.

Troy Woods

The syndrome was named after a family which was inflicted with the disease. A person who has the disease is missing factor nine in the blood. Factor nine is one of the clotting agents found in the blood of most humans.

Any time Troy suffers a slight injury he must have plasma transfusions in order to control the bleeding, whether it be internal (under the skin from a bruise) or external.

Such plasma is generally available from the Red Cross blood stores in Lynchburg or Roanoke, but if a shortage exists, the patient, if a youngster, is transferred to the Crippled Children's Hospital in Richmond.

Jack and Nancy have not asked for help in defraying their tremendous medical and personal expenses during Troy's illness, but someone close to the family indicates that the financial burden is almost more than they can bear, and that it would be a God send if some public spirited citizens could help make this a real Christmas for the Woods family.

Economist's Facts Interesting In Comparing Inflation Rate

Americans might be interested to know that despite such a longing for the good ole days, the buying power of today's nickel is not so much less than the buying power of the nickel in 1776.

With the country's 200th birthday approaching us on the heels of the present annual double-digit inflation, an Old Dominion University economics professor decided to look back over the so-called good ole days, and he came up with some interesting facts about what has happened to the buying power of our money over the past 200 years.

Using a simple conversion formula, and considering the meanderings of the value of the U.S. dollar through the years and the fact that people in 1776 used the English pound as their currency, Dr. Jack W. Nickson, Jr. has determined that what you can buy for a nickel today would have cost 2.3 cents almost 200 years ago.

So if you had in 1776 the buying power you have today, you would have paid 23 cents for today's loaf of 50 cent loaf of bread. And the $35,000 house you live in would have been mortgaged for $16,590. Those $20 shoes you wear would have been bought for $9.48 in 1776, and the $5,000 car you drive around to save that shoe leather would have had a $2,369 window sticker price.

The milk for 83 cents a half gallon, ground beef for 90 cents a pound and coffee for $1.20 a pound today would have been on your dinner table for 35 cents, 43 cents, and 57 cents, respectively.

"Considering all the conveniences we now have, and the fact that the standard of living continues to rise and all of us have more nickels now than then, the last 200 years weren't so bad," Nickson said.

"This country has always had the world's most stable economy," he said.

"We really never had inflation as we have it now until the late 1960s. We had our all-time worst inflation during the period 1777 and 1780 when there was an 18,000 per cent increase in prices, but in 1781 prices fell back to the 1776 level.

Prices have risen only 211 per cent between 1776 and 1974, and that averages out to about 1 per cent per year rate of inflation during the past 200 years, and most people can live comfortably with a 2 or 3 per cent increase in prices per year," Nickson said.

Except for the 1777-1780 high inflation period, prices remained stable from 1776 until the late 1800s, when they began to rise moderately with the advent of the industrial revolution, he explained.

Taking a look at the rate of inflation over the years, generally in time spans of 20 to 25 years, you get this kind of picture, according to the economics professor. From 1896 to 1920, prices rose at an average of 5.8 per cent a year; from 1926 to 1945 prices rose at an average of 4.6 per cent a year; from 1946 to 1968 prices rose at an average of 2.5 per cent a year.

"The ... to July 1974 prices rose 44.1 per cent (a period of only six years) for an average of 6.3 per cent a year. And from July 1973 to July 1974 the inflation rate was 15.8 per cent - for just one year," he said.

Even with double-digit inflation in 1974, the price for items in 1974 is not that much greater than the price would have been in 1776 for the same items had they been available, according to Nickson. "It's the last six years that are gouging us, and we'll just have to see where we are in 1976.

But one thing that was available in 1776 that will be available for the bicentennial is the American flag. People who are planning to buy a standard 3-by 5-foot cotton flag for home use to celebrate the bicentennial will probably pay $12.40, according to a flag-making firm in Norfolk. Based on that figure, people who bought one in 1876 to celebrate the centennial paid $8.85, and the patriots of 1776 who bought one to celebrate the country's independence paid $5.86.

School Board Meeting Set For November 12

The Appomattox County School Board will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday, Nov. 12 at 3: p.m. in the board room at the School Board Office.

The Tuesday meeting is a departure from the regular meetings, usually held the second Thursday of each month.

Several items are on the agenda including report on the Reading Program, a report on the In Service Program, which will be held Nov. 7 in Lynchburg, a progress report on the Vocational Education programs and a report on the Special Education Program.

Also the board will appoint a Central Planning Council for the school year for the 1974-75 school year and will hear a proposal from Miss Sue Holland of the Central Virginia Mental Health Service.

Miss Holland has asked that the county schools participate in a program called Students Organized for Developing Attitudes (SODA), a drug prevention program which utilizes high school students in an advisory capacity.

Fratrick Receives Fellowship

Fellowship entitles the conferee to use the title "Fellow of the American Academy of Family Physicians," or "FAAFP." The degree was conferred October 15 upon some 3,000 members of the Academy in conjunction with the AAFP's annual convention and scientific assembly in Los Angeles. Ceremonies were held in the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles before more than 7,000 persons. Fellowship candidates wore academic robes and mortarboard caps. They were recognized according to state chapter groups and the oath of fellowship was recited en masse.

Warming Up VFD Fund Drive
